At the end of this time, half of the party went to the Catskills to study the upper Devonian, while the others accompanied Professor Grabau to Boston where a day was spent in the study of the intricate structure and the stratigraphy of Nahant, and another in the study of the origin of Nantasket Beach, the volcanics of Allerton and the glacial Lake Bouve, described by Crosby and Grabau. A short time was also spent at the interesting Cambrian ledges at Weymouth, where the Etcheminian fauna was discovered some years ago. Before and after the summer session, Professor Grabau was occupied in the completion of the book on North American Index Fossils, which he is issuing in collaboration with Professor H. W. Shimer (Ph.D., 07) of the Massachusetts Institute of Technology. The first volume--823 pages, exclusive of index, and with 1,210 text figures--is now...
